Evan Farrara leverages his passionate and detail-oriented approach to support clients across all aspects of complex commercial litigation, investigations, and advocacy.

With experience that spans defending clients related to white-collar crime, intellectual property disputes, and general corporate law matters, Evan efficiently and creatively guides his clients through complex situations, leading them to favorable outcomes with a focus on long-term success.

Prior to joining Foley, Evan was a litigation associate at a Washington, D.C.-based law firm. He has served as a legal intern at several federal agencies, including the United States Attorney's Office for the District of Columbia, and as a student attorney at Rising for Justice. He worked as a research assistant for Professor Mark V. Vlasic on a variety of international law topics. After graduating from law school, Evan clerked for Judge Jason Park at the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.
