Nicholas (Nick) Gross has more than a decade of experience as a commercial litigator helping clients protect their interests and achieve their goals whether in the courtroom by obtaining favorable orders, awards, and judgments or in the conference room by helping to find business-driven, practical solutions. Nick prides himself on being a true collaborator with clients, keeping them informed and involved while he safely guides them through contentious disputes and tough decisions. Clients ranging from, health care facilities and administrators, banks, lenders, real estate developers, landlords, energy producers and utilities, as well as private and public entities, directors, officers, and other financial institutions come to Nick specifically for his legal creativity, deep understanding of industry complexities, and his ability to get the job done right.

Nick is a partner in Foley's Los Angeles office and is a member of the firm's Commercial Litigation Practice Group as well as the Energy and Health Care & Life Sciences sectors.

In health care, Nick addresses a wide range of litigation matters, including disputes over services and business agreements, regulatory compliance, billing and collections, payor liability and corporate governance or dissolution. He is particularly adept at managing complex cases involving difficult or novel legal issues, always ensuring that his clients receive considered and informed representation.

As a member of the firm's energy litigation team, Nick navigates the rapidly evolving landscape of regulatory compliance, contractual disputes, and environmental challenges. His experience spans conventional energy sources, renewable projects, electric vehicles, and emerging technologies, where he is known for crafting innovative litigation strategies that protect client interests and promote sustainable solutions.

Nick's clients value his ability to anticipate challenges and pivot quickly in high-stakes situations, where he takes a practical, business-minded approach to resolving disputes, but is always ready to take the gloves off and apply pressure to get his clients results.
