Diane Hazel is a nationally recognized antitrust litigator and former government enforcer who represents clients in complex litigation and high-stakes investigations. A former attorney at both the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) and the Colorado Attorney General's Office, Diane brings deep agency insight and strategic acumen to her work defending clients in investigations by the FTC, Department of Justice, and state Attorneys General.

Diane is a trusted advocate and litigator in some of the largest antitrust class actions in the country, with extensive experience in multidistrict litigation and federal court defense. Diane regularly represents clients facing allegations of price fixing, market allocation, monopolization, and other forms of alleged anticompetitive conduct. Her litigation practice spans a range of industries, with particular depth in technology, health care, manufacturing, and energy.

Clients value Diane's professionalism, diligence, and clear communication. She takes a practical, business-minded approach to litigation and investigations—working closely with clients to understand their goals, minimize risk, and craft creative, effective legal strategies. Diane's background as a former enforcer allows her to anticipate agency priorities and navigate complex regulatory landscapes with confidence.

In addition to her litigation and investigations work, Diane counsels clients on consumer protection matters, including compliance with FTC rules and issues related to fees and disclosures. She also advises on antitrust aspects of joint ventures, competitor collaborations, information sharing, distribution contracts, product pricing, and mergers, including Hart-Scott-Rodino (HSR) Act filings and merger reviews.

Prior to joining Foley, Diane served as a First Assistant Attorney General at the Colorado Attorney General's Office, where she led the Antitrust Unit and supervised dozens of investigations and merger reviews. At the FTC's Bureau of Competition Health Care Division, she investigated and prosecuted antitrust matters in the health care and pharmaceutical sectors. Diane was also awarded a Fulbright Grant by the U.S. State Department and spent a year in Namibia working with the Namibian government on antitrust and consumer protection initiatives.
