Matt Krueger is a former U.S. Attorney and partner in the firm's Government Enforcement Defense & Investigations practice. He helps companies and individuals navigate government enforcement and complex litigation challenges, including False Claims Act and white collar matters. Matt also assists companies in mitigating risk by advising on compliance programs and conducting sensitive internal investigations, working with clients in a range of industries, with a focus on the health care sector, cybersecurity, and data privacy matters.

Government Enforcement Defense and Investigations

Matt helps clients facing allegations of misconduct, conducting internal investigations, persuading the government not pursue charges, and, when necessary, mounting a forceful defense. Before joining Foley, Matt served as the U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Wisconsin after being recommended by a bipartisan nominating commission. Under his leadership, the office successfully prosecuted high-profile cases involving national security, cybercrime, public corruption, health care fraud, securities fraud, and other offenses. Matt also served as an Assistant U.S. Attorney and the Health Care Fraud Coordinator in both the civil and criminal divisions, specializing in False Claims Act and white-collar matters.

Complex Litigation and Appeals

Matt offers first-chair trial and appellate counsel for clients facing high-stakes disputes. Before leading trials and appeals in the U.S. Attorney's Office, Matt practiced trial and appellate litigation at an elite Washington, D.C. law firm. Matt also served as a Bristow Fellow in the Solicitor General's Office, helping represent the United States before the Supreme Court. Matt now leads complex litigation matters, devising creative strategies to win cases.

Health Care and Life Sciences

Matt defends health care and life sciences companies in government investigation and enforcement actions, conducts sensitive internal investigations, and leads high-stakes litigation matters. As a federal prosecutor and in private practice, Matt has handled civil and criminal health care cases on a range of issues and clients, including matters involving the False Claims Act, Stark Law, the Anti-Kickback Statute, the Controlled Substances Act, medical device makers, hospitals and physician groups, pharmacies, skilled nursing facilities, and laboratories.

Cybersecurity and Data Privacy

Drawing on experience leading cybercrime prosecutions, Matt works closely with Foley's cybersecurity and data privacy lawyers to investigate data incidents, respond to government inquiries, and litigate data privacy and security matters. Matt's background also allows him to counsel clients on interacting with law enforcement and regulators to minimize risks.

As a former U.S. Attorney and Assistant U.S. Attorney, Matt Krueger has first chaired and supervised numerous federal jury trials. As a federal prosecutor, Matt focused on white-collar crime. He handled and supervised complex trials involving a broad range of financial matters, including tax fraud, wire fraud, money laundering, health care fraud, and other government program fraud. Matt's approach is to develop clear trial themes and intuitive storytelling that allow jurors and judges to easily grasp complicated issues. He puts particular emphasis on ensuring that his client's expert witness testimony augments the trial themes, while developing sharp cross-examinations of opposing experts that cut to the heart of the case. He also focuses on creating powerful demonstratives that engage jurors and convey the client's story effectively. In this age of limited attention spans, Matt knows how to streamline a trial presentation and win.
