Charlie Morris is a business litigation attorney with Foley & Lardner LLP, where he represents companies and individuals in their most complex and high-stakes disputes. He has successfully litigated cases both locally and nationally involving Fortune 500 corporations, emerging businesses, large financial groups, and prominent executives across industries, guiding clients through matters with significant financial and reputational exposure.

Charlie has a proven record in the courtroom, having tried cases as both lead and co-counsel, and regularly represents clients before judges and juries in complex commercial disputes. His practice spans all stages of litigation, including pre-dispute strategy, dispositive motions, discovery, depositions, witness preparation, trial, and appeal. He has achieved favorable outcomes in a wide range of business disputes, including partnership and contract disputes, commercial real estate and construction litigation, fraud and fiduciary duty claims, and white-collar matters. Clients rely on Charlie for his strategic approach, command of complex issues, and ability to deliver efficient and effective results.

Before joining Foley, Charlie practiced at an international law firm in Salt Lake City. He began his legal career as a judicial extern for the Honorable David Sam of the United States District Court for the District of Utah.
